First ever Tourism Master Plan released

The Danville Office of Economic Development and Tourism, in collaboration with Pittsylvania County, has released its first Tourism Master Plan, which provides a guiding framework for further developing the tourism industry in this region.

The plan was paid for through American Rescue Plan (ARPA) funding and was created by Danville's tourism team and Eddy Alexander, a marketing and growth strategy consulting firm based in Roanoke. The plan relies on market and industry research and extensive community input from more than 2,000 residents and business owners across Danville and Pittsylvania County.

This is Danville and Pittsylvania County's first Tourism Master Plan master under the newly designated destination marketing and management program which falls under the Danville Office of Economic Development and Tourism.

"Tourism, Economic and Community Development is on the move. We are committed to the appreciation of the natural and historic treasures we have here, all of which create a sense of place, our own garden in the world," said Pittsylvania County Administrator Stuart Turille.

“It is so great to see the result of all the hard work come to life in this Tourism Master Plan. Eddy Alexander has been great in teaming with to produce such a robust master plan through research and community input. The Tourism Master Plan will help display our region’s marketing resources to visitors and residents by showcasing this region’s quality of life sector and I am so excited to be a part of this process,” said Kattie Saunders, Economic Development Project Manager with Pittsylvania County.
